

Telecommunications companies cannot be trusted to regulate themselves. In fact, they are known for being the most untrustworthy of almost any kind of company in the country. MCI "Slamming" is a good example of how such companies cannot be trusted in any way.

All Internet service providers MUST remain controlled under TITLE II, because they simply cannot be trusted.

Furthermore, your FCC chairman, Ajit V. Pai, cannot be trusted, as he is almost as slimy and a liar as the president of the United States, Donald Trump. YOU ARE FOOLING NO ONE, MR. PAI.

I've read that there are people who hang out around the residence of the FCC chairman, and harass him. To which I say, you knew the job was dangerous when you took it, dude! SUCK IT UP, SUCKER! And if you think it's bad now, just wait until you see what happens after you remove regulation from these companies. You'll know the true meaning of anger when you piss off millions of internet users, Mister Pai. I suggest, both for the good of the country as well as for your own well-being, that you leave net neutrality alone.

Lastly, just to be clear: I am NOT making any sort of threat. I am simply stating the fact that it would be very dangerous for you to do what you are proposing. Do you really believe you can serve your prior and future corporate masters, and not pay for your crimes? THINK AGAIN! AMERICA IS WATCHING YOU, MISTER PAI.
